

Show your love for Kepler-62e¹ by making this pledge!

I pledge allegiance to the land, and the water we shall find in abundance,² of our new planet Kepler-62e.¹

And I hereby promise to respect its natural resources, honor its aboriginal life forms, and refrain from fracking and all other invasive activities that might destabilize our molten core and force yet another interstellar migration.

With liberty and justice for all.

Built new... for you!

Kepler-62e¹

1. Official name to be determined soon!

2. Awaiting confirmation

On Kepler-62e¹, we invite you to enjoy all the comforts of home. Because Kepler-62e¹ is home. Optimized for life in the interstellar present—on clear nights, you can see Cygnus—Kepler-62e¹ is the only solid object in the universe guaranteed not to collapse on itself. So don't be left to vaporize in some backwater of the Milky Way. Pack your gravity suit and your favorite suspended animations and set a course for paradise. This time made to last.
